Mower Maintenance

Mow your lawn when it needs it. This may mean multiple times per week during active growing periods, and once every 10-14 days during slower growth.

Maintain a proper cutting height. Three inches is the general rule, but this will vary depending on the turf species present.

Sharpen your mower blade several times per year. A dull blade tears the grass, leaving it more susceptible to injury and disease.

Always mow your lawn when it is dry. This will ensure a sharper cut and limit exposure to disease.

For an extra boost of nutrients, leave your clippings on the lawn to decompose naturally
